Welcome!

In this survey, you will receive/use two passwords (which will be explained on the next page) and answer several questions related to them. During the survey, you will be asked to re-enter these passwords multiple times. Before proceeding, we ask for your consent.

Consent Form

Description of research:

The purpose of this study is to investigate how well users remember and understand passwords based on themes, which are intended to protect them against forced login.

Withdrawal:

You can withdraw your consent to be part of the study at any time before the completion of the study, meaning before you submit the survey. In this case, your collected data will be deleted by the researchers. For more information on how to withdraw from a study before completion in Prolific, see this link: <https://participant-help.prolific.com/en/article/5316d7>. Please note that we cannot delete your data after you have completed the study, since the data we collect is anonymised and we, therefore, have no chance to identify you (unless you choose to disclose identifying information about yourself when using the voting system or answering the questionnaire, in which case your data will be anonymised as described below).

Compensation: Each participant will receive £ 2.25 at the conclusion of the study through Prolific.

How we handle and delete data: If a participant discloses any personal information about themselves or other people when answering the questionnaire that could lead to identification, the researchers will remove this from the dataset and replace it with a placeholder.

What data we collect:

The participants will be asked to share the following personal data:

- Gender
- Age

- Level of education
- Nationality

We further collect the answers that the participants give to the questions in the questionnaire.

How we use the data: These data will be used to derive statistical measures of users' recall rates, understanding, and errors of theme-based passwords. Furthermore, the data will be used to derive qualitative insights into how users perceive theme-based passwords. The data might be referenced or quoted but not printed in full unless it is completely anonymised in the published research reports and other academic publications.

Who has access to the data: The researchers have access to the original data until it has been edited to replace given personal information with placeholders to anonymise it.

Researchers:

The following researchers from XXX are involved.

Password Explanation of Thematic Passwords

In this survey, you will receive two passwords, and you must always use both when logging in:

1. Your Main Password – A secure password that you can save and store (e.g., in a password manager).
2. Your Secret Thematic Password – A password based on a specific theme (e.g., colours) that you must remember but not write down.

How to Use Your Passwords:

- In a normal login (everything is fine): You enter your Main Password + your real Secret Thematic Password (the one you remembered).
- If someone is forcing you to log in: You enter your Main Password + a different word from the same theme instead of your real Secret Theme Password.

Example:

Situation	Main Password	Thematic Password (Colour)
Normal Login	Xy7&@pQ!3	yellow
Forced Login	Xy7&@pQ!3	green

When you log in using either example, the system will look the same and indicate a successful login. However, if you enter a different word instead of your real Secret Thematic Password (e.g., "green" instead of "yellow" the system will secretly detect that something is wrong and trigger a silent alarm. This alarm is discreet and doesn't notify the user directly. Instead, it sends a hidden alert to system administrators or security personnel, who can then take appropriate action without the user being aware that their input was flagged.

Helpful Tip: Stick to the Theme

To help you avoid mistakes, the system checks if your Thematic Password matches the theme.

- Correct Example: Theme = Colours → Password = "yellow" "
- Wrong Example: Theme = Colours → Password = "pizza" (not an animal/country/colour)

If you enter a word outside the theme, the system will show an error so you can try again

Key Things to Remember

- You always enter TWO passwords to log in: your Main Password and your Secret Theme Password.
- Do NOT write down your Secret Thematic Password – you must remember it.
- If you're ever forced to log in, enter a different word from the same theme.
- Your Main Password can be saved, but your Secret Thematic Password stays in your memory.

Next Step

Password Explanation of Thematic Passwords

In this survey, you will use two passwords, and you must always use both when logging in:

1. Your Main Password – A password that the system will generate and give to you. You can save and store this password (e.g., in a password manager).
2. Your Secret Thematic Password – A password you choose yourself, based on a specific theme (for example, the name of a colour). You must remember this password and not write it down anywhere.

How to Use Your Passwords

- In a normal login (everything is fine): You enter your Main Password + your real Secret Thematic Password (the country which you chose).
- If someone is forcing you to log in: You enter your Main Password + a different word from the same theme instead of your real Secret Theme Password. For example, if your real Thematic Password is “Yellow,” you could enter “Green” instead.

Example:

Situation	Main Password	Thematic Password (Colour)
Normal Login	Xy76@pQ!3	yellow
Forced Login	Xy76@pQ!3	green

When you log in using either example, the system will look the same and indicate a successful login. However, if you enter a different word instead of your real Secret Thematic Password (e.g., "Green" instead of "Yellow"), the system will secretly detect that something is wrong and trigger a silent alarm. This alarm is discreet and doesn't notify the user directly. Instead, it sends a hidden alert to system administrators or security personnel, who can then take appropriate action without the user being aware that their input was flagged.

Helpful Tip: Stick to the Theme

To help you avoid mistakes, the system checks if your Thematic Password matches the theme.

- Correct Example: Theme = Colours → Password = "yellow" "
- Wrong Example: Theme = Colours → Password = "pizza" (not an animal/country/colour)

If you enter a word outside the theme, the system will show an error so you can try again

- If you're ever forced to log in, enter a different word from the same theme.

- Your Main Password can be saved, but your Secret Thematic Password stays in your memory.

Next Step

Click Next to receive your two passwords.

Your Main Password

Below, you will find your Main Password, which you can save and store (e.g., in a password manager).

- Rm2VRGNrWp

This password must always be used together with a thematic password when logging in.
Click next to receive your thematic password.

Your Thematic Password

Below, you will find your Secret Theme Password, which you must remember but NOT write down. The theme for your secret theme password is colours.

- Purple

This password must always be used together with your main password when logging in.

Your Thematic Password

Please choose your Secret Theme Password — it must be the name of a colour. You must not write it down. This password must always be used together with your main password when logging in.

Understanding of Theme-based Passwords

In this part of the survey, we will ask you questions about your understanding of thematic passwords.

Imagine your theme is "colours" and your theme password is "Red". Which of the following words would signal that you are being forced to log in?

- (1) Brown
- (6) Pizza
- (2) Turtle
- (5) Red
- (3) Japan
- (4) None of these

Imagine the theme of your second password is "colours". What will happen if you try to log in using the word "pizza"?

- (1) The login will be successful
- (6) The login will fail
- (2) The login will succeed, but you will be asked to provide your main password as well
- (5) The system would prompt you to choose a new theme
- (4) None of these

Imagine your theme is "colours" and your theme password is "Red". Which of the following words would signal you are not being forced to log in?

- (1) Dog
- (6) Pizza
- (7) Red
- (8) Japan
- (5) Green
- (4) None of the these

Re-calling Your Passwords

In this part of the survey, we will ask you to recall your main password and your secret thematic password, which you received earlier in the process. We kindly ask that you do not go back and check the passwords, as we are investigating recall rates.

1) Please enter your main password.

1) Please enter your Secret Thematic Colour Password.

Usability of Theme-based Passwords

In this part of the survey, we will ask you questions about the usability of thematic passwords.

If you were asked to recall the secret thematic password in one week, how likely would you be to remember it?

- (1) Very likely
- (2) Somewhat likely
- (3) Neutral
- (4) Somewhat unlikely
- (5) Very unlikely

How easy was your thematic colour password to remember?

- (1) Not easy at all
- (2) Slightly easy
- (3) Somewhat easy
- (4) Moderately easy
- (5) Very easy
- (6) Extremely easy

(7) Perfectly easy

Would you prefer to choose your own password within a given theme, or have the system assign one for you? Why or why not?

I would feel more confident using a thematic password I created myself rather than one assigned by the system.

- (1) Strongly disagree
- (2) Disagree
- (3) Slightly disagree
- (4) Neutral
- (5) Slightly agree
- (6) Agree
- (7) Strongly agree

How likely would you be to use thematic passwords—consisting of a main password and a secret thematic password—outside of this study?

- (1) Very likely
- (2) Somewhat likely
- (3) Neutral
- (4) Somewhat unlikely
- (5) Very unlikely

Security of Theme-based Passwords

In this part of the survey, we will ask you questions about the security of thematic passwords.

What concerns, if any, do you have about the security of thematic passwords?

How likely is it that an attacker could detect that you used a wrong thematic password instead of your correct one?

- (1) Very likely
- (2) Somewhat likely
- (3) Neutral
- (4) Somewhat unlikely
- (5) Very unlikely

How secure are thematic passwords compared to traditional passwords?

- (1) Much less secure
- (2) Less secure
- (3) Slightly less secure
- (4) About the same
- (5) Slightly more secure
- (6) More secure
- (7) Much more secure
